The play is set in a retirement home for actors, which is a concept that I have explored with various theatrical friends for our future old age - often with great hilarity.

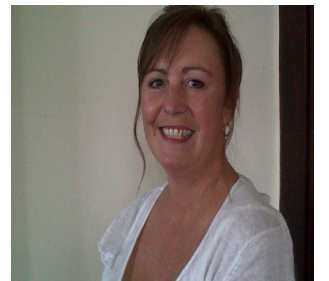

Sylvie Darling, the owner of the retirement home, runs a wonderfully comfortable house for her wacky and often irritating fellow actors. Frobisher Williams, a well-known theatrical actor and Elliot Hart, a fairly successful film actor, are constantly sparring and scoring points against each other. Phoebe Ingrams, who is in turn crazy, forgetful and funny, causes mayhem to all and indeed anyone who tries to have an intelligent conversation with her.

The scene is then set for a variety of unexpected events which mainly involve the sudden arrival of....."
